I. W. W. Sees Lease On Life In NRA "Right to Organize";

WASHINGTON — The NRA, unwittingly, has given a new lease on life to the I. W. W.

Not that the radical labor organization is for the Blue Eagle. Far from it. The wobblies assail the Recovery Act as a slick conspiracy of the "bosses" to further enslave the workers.

But with Section 7a guaranteeing labor the right to organize, the I. W. W. sees a golden opportunity to recruit its long empty ranks. In the past its greatest field of activity was in the West, particularly among the lumber and mine workers of the Pacific Northwest.

Now, however, the I. W. W. proposes to concentrate its operations in the industrial east. In a confidential memorandum sent out from national headquarters in Chicago, the organization claims progress among automobile workers in Detroit, in factories, along waterfronts in New York, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

A. F. of L. officials are closely scanning their radical rival's movements. The inside word is that the A. F. of L. will resist any attempt to encroach on its Eastern supremacy.

Gold and Youth

Tall, pleasant-mannered Attorney-General Cummings is being quizzed a lot these days about gold hoarding.

"If an indicted hoarder turns in his gold, will that act to purge him of his guilt?" asked one inquiring reporter.

Cummings studied for a moment, then replied: "I can't say, off hand. But it would be a good idea for him to give up the gold."

"General," inquired another, "is the government going to demand jail sentences for these gold hoarders it is prosecuting?"

"Ah, how youth outruns us all," was Cummings' cryptic reply.

I. C. C. Development

The next big development in railroad legislation probably will be an Administration-backed move to recast the Inter-State Commerce Commission into an all-transportation agency.

The object is to bring every form of transportation — rails, buses, aviation, trucks, inland waterways — under a common jurisdiction with wide and sweeping regulatory powers.

It is the President's private view that only by such means can there be a fundamental approach to solving the manifold ills of the railroads. His advisers on railroad matters, particularly Adolf Berle (one of the authors of the new Railroad Reorganization Act) have gone to work on a study of the whole problem. Concrete legislation is being drawn up for the coming session of Congress.

Counter Attack

A sharp tussle is going on behind the scenes over NRA Compliance Boards. These are to be set up by the President soon to supervise the enforcement of codes. He considers them extremely important.

At the request of General Hugh Johnson, Madame Perkins drew up a plan for the composition of these policing agencies. Under her formula, labor and industry would have equal representation on the Boards. Government appointees would hold the balance of power.

The formula was shown, among others, to General Thomas Hammond, head of the Blue Eagle drive, former executive of the Illinois Manufacturers Association, one of the most aggressive open-shop organizations in the country. He vocied hearty approval. But a few days later, much to the surprise of Miss Perkins and other NRA officials, Hammond submit-

BYRD, SHIP, CRIPPLED, SEEKS AID

AID IS DESPATCHED

WILMINGTON, N. C., Oct. 5.—Wallowing in a stormy sea with machinery crippled, Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd's south polar ship, Bear, sent out an S. O. S. call for aid today.

The brief radio message from the disabled polar vessel did not explain the cause of trouble but said it was unable to effect repairs at sea. It gave, however, reassuring news that the ship, while wallowing heavily in the trough of the sea, was in no immediate danger.

The vessel reported its position as in the vicinity of Frying Pan shoals, treacherous graveyard of Atlantic coast shipping.

A tug also was dispatched to the vessel's aid to bring it into port.

HOME RULE ON STATE BALLOT

Supreme Court Ruling Assured Vote on County Home Rule Plan

COLUMBUS, Oct. 5.—The proposal to amend the state constitution to provide county home rule will be placed on the ballot for the November 7 election.

Assurance of a referendum on the issue was sealed here today in a ruling of the Ohio Supreme court.

The court's ruling was handed down in the case of Alphonse Ilg of Cleveland, who sought a writ of prohibition to prevent the secretary of state from placing the issue on the ballot of the November 7 election.

Ilg questioned the sufficiency of signatures to petitions to initiate a referendum on the amendment.

The court voted 5 to 1 in overruling Ilg's application for the writ.

Ilg had claimed that the number of signatures on the referendum petitions was based on the 1930 gubernatorial election, whereas the number should be at least equal to 10 per cent of the votes cost for governor at the 1932 election.

Proponents contended, however, that the circulation of petitions took place before the 1932 election.

All members of the court except Judge Jones, of Jackson, who dissented, agreed that calculation of the number of signatures required might be based upon the 1930 election.

Th court's opinion stated that 'the petition was filed prior to the election of 1932." It added that "the fact that another gubernatorial election intervenes would not require a re-calculation."

JUDGE HEARS NILES' CASE

JURY DELIBERATES

Number in Courtroom as Hearing is Opened

Delayed when the Tatman-Preest trial was continued longer than expected, Judge J. W. Adkins began hearing the injunction proceedings of Charles Niles against the Board of Elections at 1:30 p. m. Thursday.

Niles seeks to enjoin the board from placing an initiative petition calling for a vote on municipal ownership of utilities on the November 7 ballot. The board of elections, not contesting Niles' action, wants instructions from the court as to what it should do.

Richard Preest was freed of any connection in the Bessie Tatman case Thursday afternoon when the jury reported at 1:45. The plaintiff said he was the father of her twin sons.

Prosecutor Ray W. Davis represents the board of elections with Weldon and Weldon and Charles Gerhardt being Niles' attorneys.

Garrett Claypool, Chillicothe, counsel for the Columbus Gas and Electric Co., was an interested spectator in the courtroom when the hearing began.

If no difficult points of law are presented Judge Adkins believes he will be able to announce his decision as soon as the hearing is completed.

The Tatman-Preest case, a bastardy action, was being deliberated by the jury when the injunction proceedings began. The case was submitted at 1 p. m.

Mill Replica Is Feature Of Displays In Windows; Other Exhibits Hold Eye

Wedding in Mirror Garden is Shown by Garden Club; Weapons which Figured in Major Crimes Shown by Sheriff; School Exhibits Draw Attention

Without a doubt the feature store-window exhibit of the Pumpkin Show is the replica of the original Eshelman mill, modeled by Lester Coate, W. Union-st. It is shown in the window of the Southern Ohio Electric Co., and there has been scarcely a minute since the model was placed in the window that someone has not been looking at it.

It is fashioned of stones and is surrounded by the mill race, the water of which is kept circulating by use of a pump. Minnows have been placed in the stream to give it more color.

A photo of the original Eshelman mill has been placed beside the replica for comparison.

Pictures of John W. Ehelman, 1816-1865, the founder of the mill, and of John Eshelman, son of the founder, who took over the mill in 1865, are also exhibited as are several pictures of workmen in the mill. A picture of John W. Eshelman, this city, the fourth of that name, was put in the window during the evening.

Another exhibit which is drawing much attention is in Joseph's window where the Garden club has placed a minature wedding scene in a mirror garden. The display is nicely arranged and is something quite new in Pumpkin Show annals.

A display of weapons in possession of the sheriff's office is drawing attention in the window of the Millirons barber shop. The weapons, all with a background, include the club robbers used to kill John Kidney, the revolver taken from John Hairston which proved the 'tip-off' which resulted in arrest of the culprits; the revolver with which Claude Salsberry, Columbus outlaw, shot and wounded Deputy Sheriffs Miller Fissell and Morris Boggs, and several other guns and knives. An exhibit of Boy Scout troop 107 is also in this window.

Some real antiques and relics are found in the windows of the Temple Drug store and in the Clarence Wolf grocery. Two of the interesting 'antiques' in the former are pictures of Dr. A. W. Holman way back when—

The exhibit of tropical fish of the Rainbow aquarium, Columbus, in the window of the Paul Johnson Printery is also receiving much comment and so is the exhibit of carved pumpkins in the window of Dr. D. V. Courtright's office. The carvings are the property of William Kendall, Jackson-twp.

Goodies are being baked in the Ohio Fuel Gas Co. window by Miss Vrina Hughes of the company's home economics department.

It would require a full hour's time to describe the county school exhibit in the Wilkes building, W. Main-st. Many features are found and we shall endeavor to enumerate only a few. The three bears' home made from twigs is the property of Roy Rittenger, Wayne-twp; the Jackson-twp school has a fine Indian relic display; Future Farmers of America of Walnut-twp have an exhibit of projects and awards the organizations has received; displays of native wood and of various birds' nests are drawing attention as is the seed chart of Esther Waliser, of Grade 5, Saltcreek-twp; A play-bedroom built by Pauline Jones, Alice Tip-

COUNCIL TALKS OF TRAFFIC LIGHT, HIGHWAY WORK, PIGS

City council engaged in a brief session Wednesday evening during which time traffic lights, highway improvements and pigs received attention.

The traffic light question came up when Councilman Clark Will informed council that several oil men had approached him concerning the light at Court and High-sts to which they objected. Mr. Will said he objected to the city providing advertising in one of the most favorable spots in the city to the Linco Oil Co. which placed the traffic light free of charge. The name Linco is in red letters on all four sides of the light.

Mr. Will also drew attention to the confussion caused by the name being in red letters.

TWO DEFEND IT

Councilmen T. M. Barnes and C. O. Leist spoke in defense of the light the former saying that if other oil companies care to do so they can buy traffic lights bearing their own names and have them installed. "We have several places where such lights can be used," he said. Mr. Leist cited the economy to the city and the protection the light offers even if it is advertising an oil company.

The Linco Co. operates only one station in this vicinity and that is not in the city limits.

The matter was referred to the safety committee with the safety director, J. Wallace Crist, who gave the company permission to place the light.

The highway work came into the picture when Councilman Will reported he had learned the state highway department has instructed a survey of right-of-ways for the contemplated W. Main-st paving. The matter was broached by Councilman Leist who made a report of the delegation's visit to Columbus.

PIGS IN STREET

And then came the pigs. William Montgomery, through his attorney Meeker Terwilliger, reported that a dozen or more pigs are kept in the road at the foot of S. Scioto-st making several lots he had in that vicinity useless. He

To Preside In Parades

High School Freshman is Selected Over Six Other Girls, Wednesday

IS GIVEN DIAMOND

Winner 5 Feet 1 1-2 Inches Tall, Weighs 99 Pounds

Miss Lucille Heise, 15, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Orland K. Heise, 642 E. Mound-st, is Miss Pumpkin Show and as such she shall reign during the entire event. She occupied a place of honor in the baby parade this afternoon and will be thusly honored in each parade from now until the conclusion of the festival.

Miss Heise, who entered the beauty parade Wednesday evening only after being persuaded by friends, was chosen over six other local girls. They included Misses Betty Pickens, Dorothy Bartley, Mary Anola Helwagen, Alma Gluth, Marjorie Brink and Mildred Neff.

Judges were Mrs. F. A. Dickson and A. J. Best of Pittsburgh, and Edgar Friedman of Lancaster.

NARROWED TO THREE

At the conclusion of the parade the entrants were taken to the improvised stage on Pinckney-st where they were paraded before the judges. After a few minutes the field dwindled to three girls: Miss Heise, Miss Pickens and Miss Bartley. After deliberating for a moment the judges selected Miss Heise.

She was presented a diamond ring, the premium of the Pumpkin Show to the victor.

Mrs. Nelle Phillips and Robert Adkins were in charge of the parade.

Miss Heise is a freshman in high school. She has blue eyes, brown hair, is 5 feet, 1 1-2 inches tall and weighs 99 pounds.

The contest was the first beauty competition in which she has ever entered.

The beauty parade was the initial one in Pumpkin Show history but it is expected it will be continued from now on. The beauty parade was a creation of Proctor Baughman director of parades.

TROOPS SENT TO MINE AREA

Two Wounded Men Believed Serious; Weirton Strike Is Broken

HARRISBURG, Ill., Oct. 5. — Picketing coal miners today besieged Peabody mine number 43 here, shooting two defenders at the mine shaft in a wild burst of gunfire.

The skirmishing was raging about the mine shaft office with W. C. Craig, superintendent, defending the building against the massed invaders.

Both of the wounded men were lying on the office floor, bleeding profusely from numerous bullet wounds, Craig reported by telephone. Craig could not give their names immediately.

"They're dying, I think," said Craig.

He described the skirmishing going on about the mine between a handful of defenders and the attacking pickets.

HARRISBURG, Ill., Oct. 5. — Four companies of Illinois state militia were being rushed to the Saline-co coal fields today where several hundred pickets of the Progressive miners union, armed to the teeth, were beseiging the number 43 mine of the Peabody Coal company firing on mine employees and on passersby.

STEUBENVILLE, Oct. 5. — Amid a din of "booes" and "bronx cheers" flung out by a mob of 200 pickets, 150 men returned to work today at the Pope plant of the Weirton Steel Co., here.

Other than the display of verbal protests, no effort was made to hinder the men from returning to their jobs.

HILL ENTERS PEN

Sheriff Charles Radcliff took Burl Hill, 38, colored, to the Ohio penitentiary, Thursday, where he will begin a one to 20 year sentence on a statutory charge.

HORSE PARADE HELD TONIGHT; EXHIBITS FINE

Wednesday's Crowd is the Largest Opening Night Throng in History

BABY SHOW PRETTY

Industrial, Comic Parades Planned Friday

From present indications the thirtieth annual Pumpkin Show will go down in history as one of the greatest of all time. Wednesday night's crowd surpassed any previous opening night throng and cool weather again prevailed Thursday with indications that the evening's gathering would be enormous.

No estimates were made and no estimates were needed to establish the fact that the opening crowd was a record-breaker. Throngs milled up and down the streets taking much interest in the various exhibits which were placed much better than anyone expected they would be on Wednesday evening.

STILL PUMPKIN SHOW

And another thing ! The big festival has a perfect right to retain its name because the pumpkin exhibit has surpassed last year's mark and Thursday morning more tables were being placed on N. Court-st to handle the display. Judging in this exhibit is expected to be difficult.

All free acts drew much favorable comment Wednesday evening.

The baby parade staged this afternoon smashed another record. Although the exact number of entrants will not be known until the directors in charge of the event have made their official report the number of entries is believed to have rested between the 90 and 100 mark. The parade was replete with color and a large crowd lined the streets for the event.

Another big feature of Thursday is the horse show and parade scheduled at 7:15 p. m. The parade forms at Mound- and Court-sts and moves north on Court to Pinckney to Scioto, south on Scioto to Main, east on Main to the section set aside for the horse show. Immediately following the parade will be the horse show.

A number of premiums are to be awarded in the horse show with a special premium being offered in an open class for ladies. The J. W. Eshelman & Sons Milling Co. has posted a purse of $35 for this event.

The horse parade is under the direction of L. E. Miller who is assisted by J. A. Wallace and Chester Wolfe. The pony class will be judged Saturday at 3 p. m.

INDUSTRIAL PARADE

Friday afternoon a feature event of the festival is planned. That is the industrial parade which moves at 2:15. It forms on Pinckney-st. This event is under the direction of Earl Kibler and Earl Lutz and has several classes to it. Prizes are awarded the best decorated automobile, best agricultural display, and most artistic float. An advertising class is also planned.

The industrial parade always is a feature.

Friday evening the comic and characterization parade directed by Misses Ann Bennett, Peggy Courtright and Jane Mader will be held. It moves at 7:15 with premiums for comic costume and characterization.

Thursday's music was provided by the American Legion drum corps, both schools bands and the Hallsville band, all of whom were on hand Wednesday evening, plus the Ashville Community band. The Hallsville and Ashville bands went through their paces Thursday morning beginning a few minutes after 9 o'clock.

The music Wednesday evening was fine. Jane Littleton as drum major of the senior band and Kenneth Davis drum major of the junior band made decided hits.

Friday will see a great array of music with drum corps, school bands and Hallsville bands augmented by the Laurelville and Kingston bands.

CRONIN'S MEN LOOK TO HOME AIR FOR HELP

Defeated in First Two Games; Roosevelt to Heave First Ball

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Shocked and a little dazed by the enormity of it all, the Washington Senators were back at last where they could feel they were among friends today for the third game of whatever may be left of the 1933 World series with the New York Giants, the "destiny men" of baseball who should not win but somehow have not learned to lose. However, a great change was expected here.

In New York, while the Senators were losing the first two games with only one earned run in eighteen innings, the witnesses were boisterous and uncouth. Here, there will be sympathy, foregiveness and understanding and the Senators can use all three, particularly the latter. It will take a great deal of understanding to figure out how it happened that, not only can the Giants stop the Senators but the Senators can even stop themselves. However, that's all behind them in cold, unfeeling New York.

CONDITIONS DIFFER

Here, they will have the lively American league ball to play around with, the ball with which they ran up a team batting average that topped both leagues. They will escape, too, from the foul-line menace at the Polo grounds which had their outfielders dizzy and their pitchers flinching with every ball they threw.

They likewise will have the benefit of and moral support from the foremost first-ball-thrower of all time, President Franklin Delono Roosevelt who, it was announced this morning, planned to attend the Washington opening with members of his real and his official family. The president, it was said, would arrive at the stadium a few minutes before game time at 1:30 o'clock and would throw out the first ball, thus giving the series a sense of real prestige for the first time since President Coolidge saw all the local games of the 1924 event. At that, Mr. Hoover attended one game in Philadelphia four years ago.

At least 35,000 others will be there today, including those zealots who announced their intention by staying up all night to watch the locked and darkened entrances to the park. Perhaps local enthusiasm may have been a little disconcerted by the events of the last two days at the Polo grounds but the resident of this staid, old world town is not the man to quit on his team, no matter how desperate the situation may seem.

Time to Retire O'Doul Declares

NEW YORK, Oct. 5—"I really should retire now. One time up—one hit—batting average perfect."

That was Lefty O'Doul's comment after he pinch-hit a devastating blow in yesterday's Washington-New York game with the bags full of Giants.

"The ball I hit was a curve," said Lefty. "Say, and did I feel good when I saw it sailing away! How long has this world series business been going on, anyway"

O'Doul, San Francisco product, was praised by Joe Cronin, Senators' manager, also from that city.

"Of course, it was a great feat," said Cronin. "If a hero had to be made at our expense I am glad he was from the old home town."

Bishop Backfield Stars

SIX OF EIGHT MEN AT WESLEYAN VETS

Backfield material at Ohio Wesleyan this fall is plentiful, with eight veterans available to Coach George Gauthier. Six of the eight are lettermen, too.

Chuck Vandervort, Portsmouth, quarterback; James Hoff, Columbus, fullback, and Nelson Moore, Detroit, halfback, are seniors and are playing their last season.

The other five are juniors and will be available for another season, which gives Gauthier plenty of hope for next year, too. They are John Matthews, Ashland, quarter back; George Kertz and John Turley, both of Delaware; Joseph Gall, Bedford, and Howard White, Circleville, all halfbacks.

Ohio Wesleyan is priming for its game with Dayton, Friday, and with Syracuse, which will be played Oct. 14 at Syracuse. In past encounters the Bishops have lost to Syracuse only once, winning twice and tying on the other two occasions. Last year Ohio Wesleyan won, 19 to 12.

Coach Fete Herberholz has high hopes for his athletes despite the fact that Bexley held Columbus North to a scoreless draw. Bexley's other game resulted in a victory over Mt. Sterling and an 18-0 defeat at the hands of Zanesville's Blue Devils.

Officials will include Seddon, Uridil and Boland.

Only few, if any, changes are contemplated in the Red and Black lineup.

White Sox Win

Alfred Jones, manager and coach of the Circleville colored football team, announced today that he is bringing one of the fastest colored teams in the state to this city Sunday. It is the Delaware Athletic club and the game will be played at Mason's field.

Delaware has played three games this season and hasn't been beaten so far.

CAGLE AND KELLY TEAM TAKES FIELD

The fourth week of the National Football league season finds the Brooklyn Dodgers making their initial appearance in the circuit under the ownership of Cris Cagle and Shipwreck Kelly, who will attempt the difficult role of playing owners. The Dodgers have picked a tough task for their debut under new ownership in meeting the unbeaten championship Chicago Bears at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn.

Another clash of major importance sends the league leading Portsmouth Spartans to Green Bay for their first game of the 1933 season away from home. The Chicago Cardinals, who are on their way to take the hard luck title of the season by losing their first two starts by one point margins, invade Cincinnati for the Reds opening game at Redland Field.

On top of these attractions the New York Giants will defend their lead in the Eastern section of the title race against the Redskins in the first game of the season at Fenway Park, where the Boston eleven will make its home.

The Redskins have a tough program lined up for the week. They meet the Pittsburgh team, which is highly respected after its victory over the Cards on Wednesday night in Pittsburgh before their home debut.

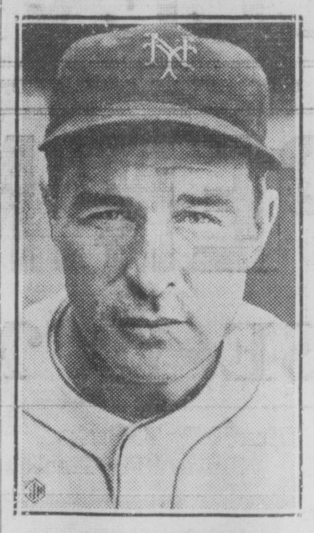
His Hit Wins



Lefty O'Doul

It was the pinch hit of Lefty O'Doul, New York Giant outfielder, that spelled defeat for the Washington Senators in Wednesday's world series game. With the bases full after Mel Ott had been purposely walked O'Doul delivered a single to score two runs, enough to win. The Giants went on to score four more times in the sixth inning.

Merry-Go-Round

If and when the London Economic Conference reconvenes, F. D. R. is anxious to have genial Jim Cox, his one-time running-mate on the 1930 ticket, head the American Delegation . . . Along with Cordell Hull, Cox stood out as the real influence at London, worked untiringly to explain the trying position in which the U. S. A. found itself . . . He made a real impression . . . Ex-Senator Owen of Oklahoma is gunning for a job on the corporation of foreign bondholders if and when it is set up under the new Securities Act . . . The job of the corporation is made abroad . . . It looks as if to try to collect defaulted loans Argentina was up against an almost impossible job in trying to get a reciprocity tariff treaty from the State Department. Agricultural sentiment in the Midwest won't stand for it . . . Cordell Hull, mountaineer Secretary of State, has an inexhaustible fund of Tennessee stories. He never tells the same one twice — at least to the same person . . . One reason for difficulty in adopting an NRA code for prison labor is the provision in the law for collective bargaining . . . Frisoners obviously cannot bargain collectively . . . If they could they would be running their own prisons . . . Captain Eugene Regnier, one-time military aide to Secretary Stimson, has been put in charge of a Citizens' Conservation Corps Camp in New Mexico . . . This is quite a comedown for a cavalry captain and he is not writing his friends about it. The Army predicted that once he let his cushy job with the State Department he would get hazed . . . Confidential reports have reached the NRA that the National Manufacturers Association has devised a form of "yellow dog" labor contract by which it can circumvent the Recovery Act . . . Two liquor tax laws have been tentatively drafted by House leaders to meet the vacuum following repeal . . . The first would give the federal government power to levy taxes on whiskey and return a prorata share to the states. The second would supplement existing tax laws so that the rectifying and labeling of liquor would prevent the return of the saloon . . . In a 9-page opinion in 1909 on the legal definition of pure whiskey, President Taft declared that the term "whiskey" was derived from the Irish word "usquebaugh," meaning spirits distilled from grain.

The Sacrifice of a Wife

By IRVIN S. COBB

TO a married man—and it doesn't make any difference how long he has been married, either—the workings of the female mind are puzzling.

Nearly everybody is acquainted—or should be—with the little tale of the husband who was describing to his friend the result of a difference of opinion with the estimable woman who bore his name and shared his lot.

"I believe in give and take," he said; "we started out that way at the beginning and we've always kept it up."

"How does the system work?" inquired his friend, who was a bachelor.

"Oh, bully. Now, for instance, here a few months ago we were going to buy some new draperies for the dining room. She wanted silk; but I wanted chintz. Well, we talked it over and finally we compromised."

"Compromised on what?"

"Oh—on silk."

There is another yarn vaguely related to the foregoing little chapter out of the domestic life of a happily wedded pair.

Mr. Smith comes home with furrows of care in his brow.

"Mary," he says, "the way bills keep piling up is scandalous. We're spending more than I make. We've got to cut expenses to the bone—both of us—if we expect to make ends meet at the end of the year. We've got to make personal sacrifices, starting with the little things and going all along the line. Now, what would you suggest?"

Mrs. Smith ponders a moment.

"I'll tell you how we'll begin," she says, brightly then: "you shave yourself—and I'll cut your hair."

COAST GUARD PLANS RUM-RUNNING 'WAR'

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5—Thirty rum-smuggling syndicates are operating off the north-eastern coast of the United States, while three rings are running liquor over the Pacific coast, according to information in the hands of the coast guard today.

The Atlantic syndicates have from one to six vessels each, while the smuggling business on the west coast is said to be more consolidated with larger operators intensely active.

These rings for months have been employing every device to get liquor into the United States as well as preparing for a continuation or even an increase of their activities after repeal, according to coast guard officials, in the belief that taxes and tariffs on the legitimate product will be high.

REPEAL TO COMPLICATE

Repeal of the eighteenth amendment may complicate for a year or two rather than solve the whiskey smuggling problems, according to fears expressed by coast guard officials who are watching the situation carefully.

Repeal of the amendment will mean that the Canadian law prohibiting clearance of liquor for American ports will become void. What course the smugglers will pursue will depend upon conditions in the American market. The coast guard, however, is making plans for a drive against the rum runners on the Great Lakes.

Canada stopped giving liquor clearance papers for the United States on the appeal of this government at a time when an enormous volume of whiskey and beer was being smuggled into this country several years ago.

In addition to the probability of fairly high tax and tariff on liquor, the limited American supply that cannot be built up to requirements for several years and the inevitable heavy demand will be important factors to stimulate the activities of the smugglers. Furthermore, the economy program has forced the coast guard to dismiss many men and lay up hundreds of its rum cruisers, giving the smugglers an added advantage.

NEW SALES TAX CONTEST SEEN

Yoder, Opponent of Utilities Tax, Named Commission Chairman

COLUMBUS, Oct. 5.—Signs of a new battle over a utilities tax the election of Senator Paul and sales tax appeared today with Yoder (D) of Dayton, leading apponent of a utilities tax, as chairman of the joint taxation commission which will revise the Ohio tax system.

Notwithstanding the election of Yoder. Senator Daniel J. Gunsett (D) of Van Wert, leader of the campaign for a utilities tax, brought the utilities tax issue before the commission at its very first meeting by asking that data on utilities taxes be obtained.

No opposition was voiced by Senator Yoder, but it was he who led the fight against a utilities tax in the state senate at the recent special session.

Representative Richard S. Douglas (D) of Cleveland, an ardent advocate of the sales tax, was elected secretary of the commission.

"This is an ideal set-up for a state sales tax," declared Senator Gunsett, following the opening meeting, when members of the commission assembled with Governor George White and Tax Commissioner Carlton Dargusch. "I am still opposed to it, and will continue to fight for a tax on utilities."

TOBACCO to grow, to ripen and become mellow, has to take in or absorb something . . . not Vitamin D, of course, but something that it gets from the right amount of Sunshine

It's the Southern sunshine you read about, combined with the right sort of climate and moisture, that makes the Carolinas, Georgia, Kentucky, Maryland, and Virginia the best tobacco country in the world.

You can stand down there in that Southern sunshine and almost see it grow.

This ripe, mellow tobacco is skillfully cured by the farmer. Then, for 30 months, it's aged—just like fine wine.

New Anti-Crime Weapon

ONE of the obstacles that hampered Chicago authorities in trying to rid the city of gangsters and thugs has been removed.

Infesting the Chicago underworld were and still are many men with known prison records and who live—many of them luxuriously—without any evident means of income. The police know them to be criminals but are unable to pin on them specific charges that will hold.

The recent session of the legislature, it has just become known generally through the conviction of several underworld figures, amended the state vagrancy law in a way to make this a useful weapon in warring on this class. Under the amended act, anyone with an evil reputation, who is without legitimate occupation and whose record shows a penitentiary, jail or workhouse term may be sent to prison for six months.

The law is one which could find victims in nearly all cities. It provides a way for striking at an element, the members of which generally are known to be criminals but who are able to avoid detection in committing crimes.

If proper use be made of it, Chicago should be able to clean out the nests of crooks that have given that city an evil reputation. A promising start in this direction has been made.

Hunter's Paradise

ANOTHER American phenomenon is that the country can lead the world in agriculture and industry and still provide good hunting for millions of sportsmen during several weeks of each year. Civilization and commercialization have encompassed rather than pushed back the wilderness.

Within a few hours' motoring distance of every great center of population in the United States can be found good gunning of some sort, although there was a period in our national development when wild life was scarce and isolated in a few narrow regions. Conservation has brought it back in abundance.

Hunting season is unusually welcome this year because of the opportunity it gives the unemployed to restock empty larders. In spite of closed seasons destitute mountaineers have subsisted for months on poached game just as their pioneer ancestors lived on the unprotected game of their day. It is unfortunate that the high cost of hunting makes it prohibitive for many city families in need of fresh meat.

In the conservation of game and the revival of good hunting the United States has demonstrated how one may eat his cake and have it too. Conservation has increased wild life in spite of a rapidly growing army of gunners. There are popular hunting grounds in the thickly populated East where bagging a deer is comparatively easy and the risk of getting shot almost as great.

CHAPTER L

In the car again, scrubbing at her sticky hands with an ineffectual handkerchief she said, "I am sorry Curtis—I shouldn't have taken so long—"

"It's all right," he said, and increased the speed, over a level stretch between two hills.

He was lost in his thoughts again, his secret, troubled thoughts. "She smiled at that old man who sold hot dogs, just the way she does at me," he thought bitterly. "A dirty old man with gray whiskers. And I used to think it was just for me—that light in her eyes and the flashing smile like sunshine . . . the fool I was . . . She has it for everybody—even a hot dog vender and a mangy dog.

"She looked at him when he gave her the extra pickle, the way she looked at me when I put my ring on her hand . . . the love that I thought would be mine, already squandered on someone else, some boy, some worthless loafer standing out in front of a poolroom now . . . Oh, what a fool I've been, what a blind, trusting fool . . ."

Her hand closed over his arm again. "Curtis, you look so stern. It—it frightens me—"

He came back with a start, tried to answer naturally. "I'm not stern—just thinking that's all—"

"About what?"

"Oh—business."

"Don't, Curtis. Please don't. This is our first day together for so long. We're always rushing, always letting people and business come between us. Can't we go slower, while we're in the lovely country, with the sunshine and the hills to see? It doesn't matter if they have to wait for us, does it?"

"Not so far as I'm concerned."

"Then let's forget them, and just go as slowly as we want to, shall we?" She laughed, and drew a little nearer. "I'm so sick of people—even nice people like the Lairds, and your mother. Let's be terribly selfish, and poke along and— Oh Curtis—look — poppies — millions of them, under the fence . . . could we . . . would it be perfectly contemptible of us to stop, and get some—please—"

He looked at the orange field of poppies, and the laughing girl beside him, her flawless skin tinged with gold in the sun.

"Perfectly contemptible of us," he said, and his heart skipped a beat. She was so lovely . . . so lovely . . .

She rolled under the barbed wire of the fence, and raced ahead into the poppies. "Aren't they beauties—did you ever see such huge ones?"

"No," he said, smiling faintly, "I never did."

"Neither did I," she started to say, and stopped. The little patch of them she and Bill had found on the high road last summer . . . Bill . . . must everything remind her of Bill? Must he be always in her thoughts, always coming between her and Curtis whom she wanted so to love . . .

With a little half strangled sob she flung herself into his arms, crushing the blossoms against his coat. "Oh Curtis—love me—love me a lot!"

His arms closed about her, almost automatically. "Love all poppies and dogs—it's all one to her," he thought. "The same degree of intensity—just a passing mood. Well, I know now . . . I know how much these sudden bursts of affection are worth . . . nothing at all . . . nothing . . ."

"Come," he said at last, "we must be going on to the cabin. The roads are dangerous up there after dark—"

"Oh yes," she cried, conscience-stricken. "And your mother may be worried. What time did she leave, Curtis? Awfully early?"

"Oh, some time before we did—come on!"

"Now you sit right there, and don't move until lunch is ready!" Ruth pushed Bill into the one comfortable chair, and kissed the top of his head.

"See, we're going to have a crab Newburg—and you don't even have to crack the crab for me! That's the kind of a hostess I am—all kinds of service. Will'um, dearie, in the top drawer of my chiffonier—in the back, under the nighties you'll find a bottle—atta boy! It's good stuff, too, a friend of mine got it from a druggist, real prescription whiskey. There are two glasses there somewhere. Now aren't you glad you came!"

She stole a quick look at herself in the mirror over the dressing table which was doing duty as buffet. Her hair looked terrible—simply terrible—but never mind, the lunch was going to be good, and she had him upstairs at last—that was the main thing.

"Say, I didn't know you could cook!" he said, passing his plate back for a second helping of crab.

"There's lots of things you don't know about me," she said. "I don't know—but people usually get the wrong idea about me, Will'um. They think if a girl is good looking she's—well—not domestic. I am. I just love to cook, and make things comfy, or I would if I had the right fellow to do it for. I get so darn lonesome all alone. Don't you ever get lonesome, Will'um?"

"Oh yes—sometimes."

"Well, now that you're back in town—"

"But I'm not going to be here long," he said quickly. "I'll have to be going back soon—"

"Bill—you aren't!"

"I have to, Ruthie."

She rose to take the plates away. "I'll miss you—"

"Come on down south, and marry Rollo, and you won't miss me," he said, avoiding her eyes.

A little spasm of pain passed over her bright face. "I told you I'd only marry for love or money," she said. "I meant it."

"Rollo will have plenty of money, and he loves you."

"You spoilt all that."

"I—why Ruth—that's a crazy thing—"

"No it isn't a crazy thing to say, Will'um. It's the truth. I'm going to say it. I've been wanting to say it long enough. I haven't been able to see Rollo, since I met you—"

Her soft arms were about his neck now, her lips on his cheek. "Will'um—do you hate me so much? Why, Will'um—you seemed to like me pretty well. I haven't forgotten the fun we had together if you have. You seemed to like me pretty well, then—"

He jumped up, and shook himself with a rather unsuccessful laugh, "See here, Ruth—this is getting dangerous. Why, what would Rollo say to me horning in on his preserves this way, and you flattering me—"

"I'm not flattering you. Oh, be serious—be serious!" she cried, her brown eyes wet and starry. "Bill Martin, you know I'm not fooling. I ought to have more sense, but darn it—I haven't. Don't go away. Don't Will'um, darling. Stay here with Ruthie." Her arms were tight around his neck now, she was holding him close.

Her voice went on, crooningly. "You know you like me—you know you do, Will'um—I can tell. And you aren't horning in on Rollo's preserves, 'cause he's out of the running—kiss me, honey! . . . No—not that way—miserable little peck, as if we'd been married ten years—or twenty—Will'um."

"Ruth—have a heart! I'm Rollo's friend—"

"The devil with Rollo. Say you're going to stay—just a little while, Will'um—just another week—come on—that's a teeny, tiny little bit to promise—one little bit of a week—"

"I've got to go back—right away. I only came up—" he broke off in confusion—"I only came up—for a couple of days—didn't really expect to stay."

He was standing up now, looking around for his hat. She saw him, knew that he was going in a moment. "I know why you came up," she cried suddenly, her eyes blazing, the red mounting to her temples with the tide of her disappointment and anger.

"Oh—well—I've got to be on my way Ruth. Thanks a lot for the—"

"Yes, thank me for the lunch and run. Run away to safety. For fear you might accidentally fall for me! And that might bother your friend Rollo—never mind me—let me break my heart if I'm fool enough to break it—that's nothing, just so long as dear, darling, lovely, sweet Rollo is happy—"

She began to cry, chokingly. "Oh Bill—it's such a farce. Such a darn, hopeless farce. I know what's the matter with you. It isn't Rollo—it Joan—Joan Hastings. I know why you came up here—to see her. To make sure that she was really going to be married. Thought it might be a misprint in the papers—ha, ha—I know—I've been watching you whenever her name was said—I know—"

"Look here, Ruth—that's no way to talk. I—"

"No it isn't—say anything but the truth! That's what you believe in doing. What's the matter with you, are you afraid? If you wanted her why did you sit back and let Barstow grab her—"

"Joan—I—I wouldn't stand in her way—"

"No—just in my way. Just break my heart for Rollo. I know you, Bill. And you do like me. I know you do. I wouldn't care if you didn't. I wouldn't run after someone who didn't want me—but I can tell you do. I know—I am no fool. Oh love me, Bill—love me—you can't have Joan—"

He took her clinging hands tight in his. "Ruth—for heaven's sake, don't rub it in. I do think a lot of you, but—I don't know—" he broke off in confusion. "Sounds silly to say it, but I guess you can only really love one woman. At least, that's how it is with me. I wish I didn't, but I always have—always will—"

Ruth's face was scarlet now, she was beyond reason, beyond control. She knew she was doing everything wrong, frightening him away, undoing all the good, but she couldn't stop now—it had to come out—

"Yes, you'll go on your whole life, worshipping at the shrine of that plaster saint—making a fool of yourself over her. I know, I know plenty more, too—plenty that would make you see she's no saint. I have a good mind to tell you—it'll do you good—you have it coming—"

She held fast to his coat, holding on with all her strength—"No you don't—no you don't walk out till I tell you! Right now—right this minute she's on a wild party with Curtis Barstow—sneaked off to a love nest in the country. And if you want to know how I know she's gone with Barstow I'll tell you—I—"

Her words ended in a shriek, a choking, agonized shriek. He had seized her, was shaking her, as a terrier shakes a rat. Her neck was breaking, her eyes were bursting out of their sockets.

With a groan he flung her on the bed, and leaned against it, his face working. For the first time in his life he had hurt a woman. He had shaken her brutally. And to think that only a moment ago he had had her arms around him, had been drawn to her, almost loving her—

The minutes passed. Ruth's whimpering cries ceased. Slowly she struggled to her feet, her eyes glued on the man whose strong brown hands had tightened on her shoulders.

Quietly, carefully, hardly breathing, she began to move to the door . . . inch by inch . . . inch by inch. . . .

Ruth was almost at the door now. In another moment she'd be safe, in the hall, calling for help. . . .

Carefully she turned the knob, never taking her eyes off of the man leaning against the bed. The door wouldn't open . . . stuck again . . . darn it—darn it—she shook it gently, a little harder, it wouldn't open! She pulled on it with all her strength, and the sticky varnish gave with a faint screech. . . .

"No—not until you tell me where Joan is—where Joan is—do you hear me?" The squeak of the door had roused him. His hands were on her shoulders again, holding her fast.

She began to whimper. "You're hurting me—let me go—I'll scream—I'll scream so loud—"

"Shut up, you little fool—keep quiet!" But he released his hold. "I'm not going to hurt you—just tell me about Joan—tell me—"

"You did hurt me—you did—"

"I know," his hands dropped heavily to his sides. "I must have been crazy. Forgive me."

"You shouldn't have done it," she said unsteadily. Her eyes rested on him accusingly, amorously . . . he was so big, so supple and strong. "I didn't know you were such a cave man! Wonder you didn't give me a black eye!" She began to giggle helplessly. "I didn't know they made 'em like that any more—"

Clean Hands Ward Off Disease

Frequent Washing Is Best Way to Rout the Germ Legions

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

MEASLES, CHICKEN pox, scarlet fever and other infectious diseases, are common ailments of childhood. It is probable that many of the diseases children catch can be traced to dirty hands where disease germs lurk. The common habit of childhood to put the fingers in the mouth increases the danger.

Dr. Copeland

This menace is ever present. No doubt it will surprise you to learn that millions of germs can be removed from your hands after handling a few door knobs and the common household objects. This fact has been demonstrated repeatedly in the researches of laboratories.

It is true that most of the germs are harmless in their nature. But occasionally the germ may be of the type that leads to serious disease. Most contagious diseases, especially the so-called "childhood diseases," are quickly spread in this manner.

Cleanliness of the hands is absolutely necessary when you care for a member of the family who is sick with a contagious disease. Carelessness in this matter may spread the disease to other members of the household.

Disinfecting the Hands

Everyone should be familiar with the simple procedure of disinfecting the hands. They should be soaked in 1 per cent "liquor cresolis compositus," or a 1:1,000 solution of bichloride of mercury. The druggist will supply the solution.

Next thoroughly wash the hands with soap and water. Follow this by again immersing the hands in the germicidal solution. Pay special attention to the spaces about the finger nails.

I wonder how many of my readers are familiar with the cleasing methods and the care of the hands used by surgeons before they operate. The surgeon washes his hands and forearms with soap and water for five minutes. He vigorously scrubs with a bristle brush and then soaks his hands for one minute in 85 per cent alcohol. The hands are then soaked in a 1:1,000 bichloride of mercury solution for two minutes.

I am telling you all this to impress upon you how important absolute cleanliness is. There has been marked improvement in the results of surgery since this thoroughness has been practiced.

Bear in mind that a very large percentage, perhaps ninety, of infectious disease can be traced to dirty hands. Children and adults should be impressed with the importance of frequent washing of the hands and always before eating or handling food

AT THE GRAND

Circumstantial evidence has sent many an innocent man to jail. Legal authorities are continually arguing whether or not it should be considered a modern jurisprudence. In "The Cowboy Counsellor," now playing at the Grand Theater, there are several graphic illustrations of the danger and foolishness of accepting such evidence as fact.

AT THE CLIFTONA

No matter how you start life and where you were born, if you are meant to be an actress, you will become one, is Elizabeth Allan's philosophy judging from her own career which currently rests in "No Marriage Ties," Richard Dix's latest starring picture for RKO-Radio Pictures coming to the Cliftona Theatre.

Born in the small seaside village of Skegness, Lincolnshire Eng., Miss Allan aspired to teaching, specializing in elocution. As the crowning effort of her training she understudied a leading actress at the Vic theatre in London. She remained to act in provincial tours, and in a short time became a seasoned player.

Miss Allan's screen career, while brief, has been auspicious. Her first picture was "Alibi." She scored in "Yesterday's Rich," featured with Colin Clive and Lewis Stone, and was then featured with Leslie Howard in "Berkeley Square."

Freckled, red-haired, blue-eyed, five feet five and twenty-three years of age, Elizabeth Allan is a vivacious, superbly talented English miss. She is especially suited for dramatic roles, such as the one she plays with Dix in "No Marriage Ties."

Will Rogers Picks A Story For This Spot

By WILL ROGERS

THE best story at Atlantic City is about a Scotchman. They stick to Scotch at Atlantic City, because they're kinda conservative. Well, this Scotchman by the name of McGregor, was awful careful about his eating. He never eat breakfast all week, and he had only a cup of coffee for dinner, and ate mighty little. When he was walking up to pay his bill, he learned that the meals went in with the price of the room. He ran right past everybody and drowned himself in the ocean.

WALNUT-TWP SCHOOL NOTES

Eighth Grade, Mr. Griffith

Glen Goldsberry and Elizabeth Smith entered the eighth grade this week. This makes a total attendance of fourty-five.

High School

WALNUT HAS VISITOR FROM SUNNY SOUTH

The American Literature and American History classes were honored Wednesday by Captain Tom Gibson of Friar's Point, Miss. Mr. Gibson owns and operates a plantation of some two thousand acres in that state on which, with the exception of a very little livestock, the chief product is cotton.

He gave a forty-five minute talk which was probably one of the most interesting ever given in the Walnut High School auditorium. He explained their method of tilling the soil, their ways of getting labor, their ways of paying or providing for the negro and their ways of punishing the negro for disobedience or crime. He told of the activities of the negro, particularly their ways of living, their religious services, superstitions and "hoo dooes."

His talk was greatly made most colorful by actual stories told of happenings on or around his own plantation. No speaker could have wished for a more attentive audience as the classes sat spell bound while he told of a life so much different from our own.

However, Walnut had a few things to show Mr. Gibson which were new to him and his Southland. Taken on a visit to the Agriculture and Farm Shops he said that this was something unheard of in their southern schools and congratulated us on our achievements.

Miss Jones

The first year French class has begun the conjugation of verbs.

The American Literature class has begun the study of the colonial period.

The burlap was received last Wednesday for the Pictorial Museum of Senior Literature. Panels of green burlap were hung between each of the windows and wide strips were tacked above the blackboards. Colorful pictures will be placed on the burlap tracing American Literature.

Ralph Dunkel, '35, handed in the following themes:

"And does the journey last the livelong day?
From morn till night, my friend,
And does the road wind up hill all the way?
Yes, to the very end."

When you begin life there is one thing you must do, always, that is fight for a living, (if you expect to be a man). Some people work awhile and rest awhile, they never reach the top. It is the person who applys himself that goes places.

Some people say, "He's lucky," he gets the breaks. He probably makes the breaks come to him.

Edison says the genius is ninety-eight per cent perspiration and two per cent inspiration. He worked from twelve to eighteen hours a day and if any man ever reached the top he did.

Some people say that the world owes them a living. It does but you have to work to get it. Regardless of what lines of work you are in, if you do the best you can, first, last and all the time you will climb the ladder of success. You can't keep a good man down.

A DREAM

I went to sleep one night and had a beautiful dream. I dreamed I was a dentist and was applying my skill on Doc. Drill, my dentist.

I had him strapped to the chair with his mouth pried open. First I took a drill and turned on full speed straight at a beautiful molar, grinding and grating until I had reached the nerve. Then I gently but consistently explored the cavity to find the "ouchiest" spot.

During the enjoyable process I mixed up the conversation with, "Open your mouth a little wider, it won't take long now," and, "Come back in three days."

The scene shifts to a school room and the pupils are the teachers of Walnut school. The pupils are assigning the lessons which are as follows: Sixty-eight pages of History with forty dates to memorize, ninety Physics problems to illustrate and explain; a special assignment for one person (extra) is twenty hours a day of cement laying, and eighty-four pages of England's development to study and outline.

This is given with a caution of, "Anyone not completing his assignment twice—fails."

Home Making, Miss Mettler

The first year class has their laboratory aprons well started. They are progressing of very rapidly as a class.

The second and third year classes are still on the wardrobe project but in about two weeks they will start to make wool dresses. Some must make woolen dresses while others can choose whatever kind of material they want. It is thought now several girls are contemplating making woolen suits.

Shop Class, Mr. Bowne

The shop class has just finished making bench staps for the work benches and tool and mail boxes. In making these two articles they acquired seven skills and had a large number of experience. They learned how to measure with a square, saw a straight line, smooth down a board with a plane; how to adjust and use a T-level and the use of a brace and bit.

Some of the boy's tool and nail boxes will be on exhibit at the Pumpkin Show.

The local F. F. A. is going to have the same exhibit at the Pumpkin Show they had at the Ohio State Fair. It will be shown with the school exhibit this year.

Miss Ruffner, Music

The fourth, fifth, and sixth grade classes are singing two part music.

The seventh grade correlated their English and Music the past week. The class wrote descriptions of the Indian song and

The eighth grade music class is singing three part music.

Mr. Hickman is making plans for class instrumental lessons.

The high school glee club has ordered the "Everybody Sing Book."

Glee Club

The Glee club elected its officers for the year at the meeting Monday, Sept. 25. The following officers were elected:

President, Warren Brown; Vice President, Elizabeth Reber; Secretary and Treasurer, Jean Costlow; News Reporter, Grace Jinks. The Glee Club has begun work on the radioletta "Please Stand By." It promises to be a real favorite. Watch the paper for further announcements.

Howard Cordray, class of '33, Freshman in Public School Music course was elected to the men's Glee Club at Capital university. This is a rare compliment to a Freshman. He has had no voice lessons other than the training in the high school Glee Club, which Miss Ruffner directs. The director of Glee Club at Capital university is Mr. Wilbur E. Crist. It was his same Glee Club which won the state champion ship in '31 and '33.

The weekly report ending Sept. 28 shows boy's percentage of attendance 81; girls 96.

The monthly report shows the total enrollment now is 146, there being 72 boys and 74 girls. The boys' per centage of attendance for the month was 88; girls 97. The average daily attendance for the boys is 62 for girls 72 making a total of 135. There has been only two cases of tardiness.

Heaviest Insect to Scale Ceiling

The largest and heaviest insect which can walk upside down on a ceiling is probably the gecko, the general term applied to any lizard of the family Geckonidae. The group is cosmopolitan in distribution, occurring anywhere in warmer climates, even in the remotest oceanic islands, and is adapted to very diverse habitats. The geckos are for the most part not larger than the common American chameleon, that is, nine inches, including the tail.

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

I. W. W. Sees Lease On Life In NRA "Right to Organize";

WASHINGTON — The NRA, unwittingly, has given a new lease on life to the I. W. W.

Not that the radical labor organization is for the Blue Eagle. Far from it. The wobblies assail the Recovery Act as a slick conspiracy of the "bosses" to further enslave the workers.

But with Section 7a guaranteeing labor the right to organize, the I. W. W. sees a golden opportunity to recruit its long empty ranks. In the past its greatest field of activity was in the West, particularly among the lumber and mine workers of the Pacific Northwest.

Now, however, the I. W. W. proposes to concentrate its operations in the industrial east. In a confidential memorandum sent out from national headquarters in Chicago, the organization claims progress among automobile workers in Detroit, in factories, along waterfronts in New York, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

A. F. of L. officials are closely scanning their radical rival's movements. The inside word is that the A. F. of L. will resist any attempt to encroach on its Eastern supremacy.

Gold and Youth

Tall, pleasant-mannered Attorney-General Cummings is being quizzed a lot these days about gold hoarding.

"If an indicted hoarder turns in his gold, will that act to purge him of his guilt?" asked one inquiring reporter.

Cummings studied for a moment, then replied: "I can't say, off-hand. But it would be a good idea for him to give up the gold."

"General," inquired another, "is the government going to demand jail sentences for these gold hoarders it is prosecuting?"

"Ah, how youth outruns us all," was Cummings' cryptic reply.

I. C. C. Development

The next big development in railroad legislation probably will be an Administration-backed move to recast the Inter-State Commerce Commission into an all-transportation agency.

The object is to bring every form of transportation — rails, buses, aviation, trucks, inland waterways — under a common jurisdiction with wide and sweeping regulatory powers.

It is the President's private view that only by such means can there be a fundamental approach to solving the manifold ills of the railroads. His advisers on railroad matters, particularly Adolf Berle one of the authors of the new Railroad Reorganization Act) have gone to work on a study of the whole problem. Concrete legislation is being drawn up for the coming session of Congress.

Counter Attack

A sharp tussle is going on behind the scenes over NRA Compliance Boards. These are to be set up by the President soon to supervise the enforcement of codes. He considers them extremely important.

At the request of General Hugh Johnson, Madame Perkins drew up a plan for the composition of these policing agencies. Under her formula, labor and industry would have equal representation on the Boards. Government appointees would hold the balance of power.

The formula was shown, among others, to General Thomas Hammond, head of the Blue Eagle drive, former executive of the Illinois Manufacturers Association, one of the most aggressive open-shop organizations in the country. He vocied hearty approval. But a few days later, rauch to the surprise of Miss Perkins and other NRA officials, Hammond submit-

BYRD, SHIP, CRIPPLED, SEEKS AID

AID IS DESPATCHED

WILMINGTON, N. C., Oct. 5.— Wallowing in a stormy sea with machinery crippled, Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd's south polar ship, Bear, sent out an S. O. S. call for aid today.

The distress call was picked up here by the coastguard cutter Modoc which left immediately under full steam.

The brief radio message from the disabled polar vessel did not explain the cause of trouble but said it was unable to effect repairs at sea. It gave, however, reassuring news that the ship, while wallowing heavily in the trough of the sea, was in no immediate danger.

The vessel reported its position as in the vicinity of Frying Pan shoals, treacherous graveyard of Atlantic coast shipping.

A tug also was dispatched to the vessel's aid to bring it into port.

Byrd's ship sailed from Boston, Sept. 25 on the explorer's second trip to little America.

HOME RULE ON STATE BALLOT

Supreme Court Ruling Assured Vote on County Home Rule Plan

COLUMBUS, Oct. 5.—The proposal to amend the state constitution to provide county home rule will be placed on the ballot for the November 7 election.

Assurance of a referendum on the issue was sealed here today in a ruling of the Ohio Supreme court.

The court's ruling was handed down in the case of Alphonse Ilg of Cleveland, who sought a writ of prohibition to prevent the secretary of state from placing the issue on the ballot of the November 7 election.

Ilg questioned the sufficiency of signatures to petitions to initiate a referendum on the amendment.

The court voted 5 to 1 in overruling Ilg's application for the writ.

Ilg had claimed that the number of signatures on the referendum petitions was based on the 1930 gubernatorial election, whereas the number should be at least equal to 10 per cent of the votes cost for governor at the 1932 election.

Proponents contended, however, that the circulation of petitions took place before the 1932 election.

All members of the court except Judge Jones, of Jackson, who dissented, agreed that calculation of the number of signatures required might be based upon the 1930 election.

Th court's opinion stated that 'the petition was filed prior to the election of 1932." It added that "the fact that another gubernatorial election intervenes would not require a re-calculation."

JUDGE HEARS NILES' CASE

JURY DELIBERATES

Number in Courtroom as Hearing is Opened

Delayed when the Tatman-Preest trial was continued longer than expected, Judge J. W. Adkins began hearing the injunction proceedings of Charles Niles against the Board of Elections at 1:30 p. m. Thursday.

Niles seeks to enjoin the board from placing an initiative petition calling for a vote on municipal ownership of utilities on the November 7 ballot. The board of elections, not contesting Niles' action, wants instructions from the court as to what it should do.

Richard Preest was freed of any connection in the Bessie Tatman case Thursday afternoon when the jury reported at 1:45. The plaintiff said he was the father of her twin sons.

Prosecutor Ray W. Davis represents the board of elections with Weldon and Weldon and Charles Gerhardt being Niles' attorneys.

Garrett Claypool, Chillicothe, counsel for the Columbus Gas and Electric Co., was an interested spectator in the courtroom when the hearing began.

If no difficult points of law are presented Judge Adkins believes he will be able to announce his decision as soon as the hearing is completed.

The Tatman-Preest case, a bastardy action, was being deliberated by the jury when the injunction proceedings began. The case was submitted at 1 p. m.

Wedding in Mirror Garden is Shown by Garden Club; Weapons which Figured in Major Crimes Shown by Sheriff; School Exhibits Draw Attention

Without a doubt the feature store-window exhibit of the Pumpkin Show is the replica of the original Eshelman mill, modeled by Lester Coate, W. Union-st. It is shown in the window of the Southern Ohio Electric Co., and there has been scarcely a minute since the model was placed in the window that someone has not been looking at it.

It is fashioned of stones and is surrounded by the mill race, the water of which is kept circulating by use of a pump. Minnows have been placed in the stream to give it more color.

A photo of the original Eshelman mill has been placed beside the replica for comparison.

Pictures of John W. Ehelman, 1816-1865, the founder of the mill, and of John Eshelman, son of the founder, who took over the mill in 1865, are also exhibited as are several pictures of workmen in the mill. A picture of John W. Eshelman, this city, the fourth of that name, was put in the window during the evening.

Another exhibit which is drawing much attention is in Joseph's window where the Garden club has placed a minature wedding scene in a mirror garden. The display is nicely arranged and is something quite new in Pumpkin Show annals.

A display of weapons in possession of the sheriff's office is drawing attention in the window of the Millirons barber shop. The weapons, all with a background, include the club robbers used to kill John Kidney, the revolver taken from John Hairston which proved the 'tip-off' which resulted in arrest of the culprits; the revolver with which Claude Salsberry, Columbus outlaw, shot and wounded Deputy Sheriffs Miller Fissell and Morris Boggs, and several other guns and knives. An exhibit of Boy Scout troop 107 is also in this window.

Some real antiques and relics are found in the windows of the Temple Drug store and in the Clarence Wolf grocery. Two of the interesting 'antiques' in the former are pictures of Dr. A. W. Holman way back when.

The exhibit of tropical fish of the Rainbow aquarium, Columbus, in the window of the Paul Johnson Printery, is also receiving much comment and so is the exhibit of carved pumpkins in the window of Dr. D. V. Courtright's office. The carvings are the property of William Kendall, Jackson-twp.

Goodies are being baked in the Ohio Fuel Gas Co. window by Miss Vrina Hughes of the company's home economics department.

It would require a full hour's time to describe the county school exhibit in the Wilkes building, W. Main-st. Many features are found and we shall endeavor to enumerate only a few. The three bears' home made from twigs is the property of Roy Rittenger, Wayne-twp; the Jackson-twp school has a fine Indian relic display; Future Farmers of America of Walnut-twp have an exhibit of projects and awards the organizations has received; displays of native wood and of various birds' nests are drawing attention as is the seed chart of Esther Waliser, of Grade 5, Saltcreek-twp; A play-bedroom built by Pauline Jones, Alice Tip-

SPARKS CAUSE FIRE

COUNCIL TALKS OF TRAFFIC LIGHT, HIGHWAY WORK, PIGS

City council engaged in a brief session Wednesday evening during which time traffic lights, highway improvements and pigs received attention.

The traffic light question came up when Councilman Clark Will informed council that several oil men had approached him concerning the light at Court and High-sts to which they objected. Mr. Will said he objected to the city providing advertising in one of the most favorable spots in the city to the Linco Oil Co. which placed the traffic light free of charge. The name Linco is in red letters on all four sides of the light.

Mr. Will also drew attention to the confussion caused by the name being in red letters.

TWO DEFEND IT

Councilmen T. M. Barnes and C. O. Leist spoke in defense of the light the former saying that if other oil companies care to do so they can buy traffic lights bearing their own names and have them installed. "We have several places where such lights can be used," he said. Mr. Leist cited the economy to the city and the protection the light offers even if it is advertising an oil company.

The Linco Co. operates only one station in this vicinity and that is not in the city limits.

The matter was referred to the safety committee with the safety director, J. Wallace Crist, who gave the company permission to place the light.

The highway work came into the picture when Councilman Will reported he had learned the state highway department has instructed a survey of right-of-ways for the contemplated W. Main-st paving. The matter was broached by Councilman Leist who made a report of the delegation's visit to Columbus.

PIGS IN STREET

And then came the pigs. William Montgomery, through his attorney Meeker Terwilliger, reported that a dozen or more pigs are kept in the road at the foot of S. Scioto-st making several lots he had in that vicinity useless. He

To Preside In Parades

High School Freshman is Selected Over Six Other Girls, Wednesday

IS GIVEN DIAMOND

Winner 5 Feet 1 1-2 Inches Tall, Weighs 99 Pounds

Miss Lucille Heise, 15, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Orland K. Heise, 642 E. Mound-st, is Miss Pumpkin Show and as such she shall reign during the entire event. She occupied a place of honor in the baby parade this afternoon and will be thusly honored in each parade from now until the conclusion of the festival.

Miss Heise, who entered the beauty parade Wednesday evening only after being persuaded by friends, was chosen over six other local girls. They included Misses Betty Pickens, Dorothy Bartley, Mary Anola Helwagen, Alma Gluth, Marjorie Brink and Mildred Neff.

Judges were Mrs. F. A. Dickson and A. J. Best of Pittsburgh, and Edgar Friedman of Lancaster.

NARROWED TO THREE

At the conclusion of the parade the entrants were taken to the improvised stage on Pinckney-st where they were paraded before the judges. After a few minutes the field dwindled to three girls: Miss Heise, Miss Pickens and Miss Bartley. After deliberating for a moment the judges selected Miss Heise.

She was presented a diamond ring, the premium of the Pumpkin Show to the victor.

Mrs. Nelle Phillips and Robert Adkins were in charge of the parade.

Miss Heise is a freshman in high school. She has blue eyes, brown hair, is 5 feet, 1 1-2 inches tall and weighs 99 pounds.

The contest was the first beauty competition in which she has ever entered.

The beauty parade was the initial one in Pumpkin Show history but it is expected it will be continued from now on. The beauty parade was a creation of Proctor Baughman director of parades.

TROOPS SENT TO MINE AREA

Two Wounded Men Believed Serious; Weirton Strike Is Broken

HARRISBURG, Ill., Oct. 5. — Picketing coal miners today besieged Peabody mine number 43 here, shooting two defenders at the mine shaft in a wild burst of gunfire.

The skirmishing was raging about the mine shaft office with W. C. Craig, superintendent, defending the building against the massed invaders.

Both of the wounded men were lying on the office floor, bleeding profusely from numerous bullet wounds, Craig reported by telephone. Craig could not give their names immediately.

"They're dying, I think," said Craig.

He described the skirmishing going on about the mine between a handful of defenders and the attacking pickets.

HARRISBURG, Ill., Oct. 5. — Four companies of Illinois state militia were being rushed to the Saline-co coal fields today where several hundred pickets of the Progressive miners union, armed to the teeth, were beseiging the number 43 mine of the Peabody Coal company firing on mine employees and on passersby.

STEUBENVILLE, Oct. 5 — Amid a din of "booes" and "bronx cheers" flung out by a mob of 200 pickets, 150 men returned to work today at the Pope plant of the Weirton Steel Co., here.

Other than the display of verbal protests, no effort was made to hinder the men from returning to their jobs.

HILL ENTERS PEN

Sheriff Charles Radcliff took Burl Hill, 38, colored, to the Ohio penitentiary, Thursday, where he will begin a one to 20 year sentence on a statutory charge.

HORSE PARADE HELD TONIGHT; EXHIBITS FINE

Wednesday's Crowd is the Largest Opening Night Throng in History

BABY SHOW PRETTY

Industrial, Comic Parades Planned Friday

From present indications the thirtieth annual Pumpkin Show will go down in history as one of the greatest of all time. Wednesday night's crowd surpassed any previous opening night throng and cool weather again prevailed Thursday with indications that the evening's gathering would be enormous.

No estimates were made and no estimates were needed to establish the fact that the opening crowd was a record-breaker. Throngs milled up and down the streets taking much interest in the various exhibits which were placed much better than anyone expected they would be on Wednesday evening.

Operators of the various rides and amusements reported good business.

STILL PUMPKIN SHOW

And another thing! The big festival has a perfect right to retain its name because the pumpkin exhibit has surpassed last year's mark and Thursday morning more tables were being placed on N. Court-st to handle the display. Judging in this exhibit is expected to be difficult.

All free acts drew much favorable comment Wednesday evening.

The baby parade staged this afternoon smashed another record. Although the exact number of entrants will not be known until the directors in charge of the event have made their official report the number of entries is believed to have rested between the 90 and 100 mark. The parade was replete with color and a large crowd lined the streets for the event.

Another big feature of Thursday is the horse show and parade scheduled at 7:15 p. m. The parade forms at Mound- and Court-sts and moves north on Court to Pinckney to Scioto, south on Scioto to Main, east on Main to the section set aside for the horse show. Immediately following the parade will be the horse show.

A number of premiums are to be awarded in the horse show with a special premium being offered in an open class for ladies. The J. W. Eshelman & Sons Milling Co. has posted a purse of $35 for this event.

The horse parade is under the direction of L. E. Miller who is assisted by J. A. Wallace and Chester Wolfe. The pony class will be judged Saturday at 3 p. m.

INDUSTRIAL PARADE

Friday afternoon a feature event of the festival is planned. That is the industrial parade which moves at 2:15. It forms on Pinckney-st. This event is under the direction of Earl Kibler and Earl Lutz and has several classes to it. Prizes are awarded the best decorated automobile, best agricultural display, and most artistic float. An advertising class is also planned.

The industrial parade always is a feature.

Friday evening the comic and characterization parade directed by Misses Ann Bennett, Peggy Courtright and Jane Mader will be held. It moves at 7:15 with premiums for comic costume and characterization.

Thursday's music was provided by the American Legion drum corps, both schools bands and the Hallsville band, all of whom were on hand Wednesday evening, plus the Ashville Community band. The Hallsville and Ashville bands went through their paces Thursday morning beginning a few minutes after 9 o'clock.

The music Wednesday evening was fine. Jane Littleton as drum major of the senior band and Kenneth Davis drum major of the junior band made decided hits.

Friday will see a great array of music with drum corps, school bands and Hallsville bands augmented by the Laurelville and Kingston bands.

BRAUGHT PLANS RELIEF CENSUS

COLUMBUS, Oct. 5 Preparations were laid by the state relief commission today for the taking of a complete census of persons in Ohio receiving public relief.

The census, according to Major E. O. Braught, secretary of the relief commission, will be used in determining future unemployment relief policies. It will be taken of Oct. 31.

...ONIN'S MEN ...OOK TO HOME ...AIR FOR HELP

...feated in First Two Games; ...n Roosevelt to Heave First Ball

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Shocked and a little dazed by the enormity of it all, the Washington Senators were back at last where they could feel they were among friends today for the third game of whatever may be left of the 1933 World series with the New York Giants, the "destiny men" of baseball who should not win but somehow have not learned to lose. However, a great change was expected here.

In New York, while the Senators were losing the first two games with only one earned run in eighteen innings, the witnesses were boisterous and uncouth. Here, there will be sympathy, foregiveness and understanding and the Senators can use all three, particularly the latter. It will take a great deal of understanding to figure out how it happened that, not only can the Giants stop the Senators but the Senators can even stop themselves. However, that's still behind them in cold, unfeeling New York.

CONDITIONS DIFFER

Here, they will have the lively American league ball to play around with, the ball with which they ran up a team batting average that topped both leagues. They will escape, too, from the foul-line menace at the Polo grounds which had their outfielders dizzy and their pitchers flinching with every ball they threw.

They likewise will have the benefit of and moral support from the foremost first-ball-thrower of all time, President Franklin Delono Roosevelt, who, it was announced this morning, planned to attend the Washington opening with members of his real and his official family. The president, it was said, would arrive at the stadium a few minutes before game time at 1:30 o'clock and would throw out the first ball, thus giving the series a sense of real prestige for the first time since President Coolidge saw all the local games of the 1924 event. At that, Mr. Hoover attended one game in Philadelphia four years ago.

At least 35,000 others will be there today, including those zealots who announced their intention by staying up all night to watch the locked and darkened entrances to the park. Perhaps local enthusiasm may have been a little disconcerted by the events of the last two days at the Polo grounds but the resident of this staid, old world town is not the man to quit on his team, no matter how desperate the situation may seem.

Time to Retire O'Doul Declares

NEW YORK, Oct. 5—"I really should retire now. One time up—one hit—batting average perfect."

That was Lefty O'Doul's comment after he pinch-hit a devastating blow in yesterday's Washington-New York game with the bags full of Giants.

"The ball I hit was a curve," said Lefty. "Say, and did I feel good when I saw it sailing away! How long has this world series business been going on, anyway"

O'Doul, San Francisco product, was praised by Joe Cronin, Senators' manager, also from that city.

"Of course, it was a great feat," said Cronin. "If a hero had to be made at our expense I am glad he was from the old home town."

Bishop Backfield Stars

* * * * * *

SIX OF EIGHT MEN AT WESLEYAN VETS

Backfield material at Ohio Wesleyan this fall is plentiful, with eight veterans available to Coach George Gauthier. Six of the eight are lettermen, too.

Chuck Vandervort, Portsmouth, quarterback; James Hoff, Columbus, fullback, and Nelson Moore, Detroit, halfback, are seniors and are playing their last season.

The other five are juniors and will be available for another season, which gives Gauthier plenty of hope for next year, too. They are John Matthews, Ashland, quarter back; George Kertz and John Turley, both of Delaware; Joseph Gall, Bedford, and Howard White, Circleville, all halfbacks.

Ohio Wesleyan is priming for its game with Dayton, Friday, and with Syracuse, which will be played Oct. 14 at Syracuse. In past encounters the Bishops have lost to Syracuse only once, winning twice and tying on the other two occasions. Last year Ohio Wesleyan won, 19 to 12.

CAGLE AND KELLY TEAM TAKES FIELD

The fourth week of the National Football league season finds the Brooklyn Dodgers making their initial appearance in the circuit under the ownership of Cris Cagle and Shipwreck Kelly, who will attempt the difficult role of playing owners. The Dodgers have picked a tough task for their debut under new ownership in meeting the unbeaten championship Chicago Bears at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn.

Another clash of major importance sends the league leading Portsmouth Spartans to Green Bay for their first game of the 1933 season away from home. The Chicago Cardinals, who are on their way to take the hard luck title of the season by losing their first two starts by one point margins, invade Cincinnati for the Reds opening game at Redland Field.

On top of these attractions the New York Giants will defend their lead in the Eastern section of the title race against the Redskins in the first game of the season at Fenway Park, where the Boston eleven will make its home.

The Redskins have a tough program lined up for the week. They meet the Pittsburgh team, which is highly respected after its victory over the Cards, on Wednesday night in Pittsburgh before their home debut.

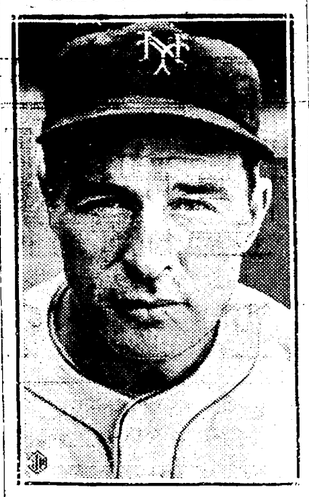
His Hit Wins



Lefty O'Doul

It was the pinch hit of Lefty O'Doul, New York Giant outfielder, that spelled defeat for the Washington Senators in Wednesday's world series game. With the bases full after Mel Ott had been purposely walked O'Doul delivered a single to score two runs, enough to win. The Giants went on to score four more times in the sixth inning.

The Sacrifice of a Wife

By IRVIN S. COBB

TO a married man—and it doesn't make any difference how long he has been married, either—the workings of the female mind are puzzling.

Nearly everybody is acquainted—or should be—with the little tale of the husband who was describing to his friend the result of difference of opinion with the estimable woman who bore his name and shared his lot.

"I believe in give and take," he said; "we started out that way at the beginning and we've always kept it up."

"How does the system work?" inquired his friend, who was a bachelor.

"Oh, bully. Now, for instance, here a few months ago we were going to buy some new draperies for the dining room. She wanted silk; but I wanted chintz. Well, we talked it over and finally we compromised."

"Compromised on what?"

"Oh—on silk."

There is another yarn vaguely related to the foregoing little chapter out of the domestic life of a happily wedded pair.

Mr. Smith comes home with furrows of care in his brow.

"Mary," he says, "the way bills keep piling up is scandalous. We're spending more than I make. We've got to cut expenses to the bone—both of us—if we expect to make ends meet at the end of the year. We've got to make personal sacrifices, starting with the little things and going all along the line. Now, what would you suggest?"

Mrs. Smith ponders a moment.

"I'll tell you how we'll begin," she says, brightly then: "you shave yourself—and I'll cut your hair."

COAST GUARD PLANS RUM-RUNNING 'WAR'

WASHINGTON, Oct. 5—Thirty rum-smuggling syndicates are operating off the north-eastern coast of the United States, while three rings are running liquor over the Pacific coast, according to information in the hands of the coast guard today.

The Atlantic syndicates have from one to six vessels each, while the smuggling business on the west coast is said to be more consolidated with larger operators intensely active.

These rings for months have been employing every device to get liquor into the United States as well as preparing for a continuation or even an increase of their activities after repeal, according to coast guard officials, in the belief that taxes and tariffs on the legitimate product will be high.

REPEAL TO COMPLICATE

Repeal of the eighteenth amendment may complicate for a year or two rather than solve the whiskey smuggling problems, according to fears expressed by coast guard officials who are watching the situation carefully.

Repeal of the amendment will mean that the Canadian law prohibiting clearance of liquor for American ports will become void. What course the smugglers will pursue will depend upon conditions in the American market. The coast guard, however, is making plans for a drive against the rum runners on the Great Lakes.

Canada stopped giving liquor clearance papers for the United States on the appeal of this government at a time when an enormous volume of whiskey and beer was being smuggled into this country several years ago.

In addition to the probability of fairly high tax and tariff on liquor, the limited American supply that cannot be built up to requirements for several years and the inevitable heavy demand will be important factors to stimulate the activities of the smugglers. Furthermore, the economy program has forced the coast guard to dismiss many men and lay up hundreds of its rum cruisers, giving the smugglers an added advantage.

COLUMBUS, Oct. 5.—Signs of a new battle over a utilities tax the election of Senator Paul and sales tax appeared today with Yoder (D) of Dayton, leading apponent of a utilities tax, as chairman of the joint taxation commission which will revise the Ohio tax system.

Notwithstanding the election of Yoder. Senator Daniel J. Gunsett (D) of Van Wert, leader of the campaign for a utilities tax, brought the utilities tax issue before the commission at its very first meeting by asking that data on utilities taxes be obtained.

No opposition was voiced by Senator Yoder, but it was he who led the fight against a utilities tax in the state senate at the recent special session.

Representative Richard S. Douglas (D) of Cleveland, an ardent advocate of the sales tax, was elected secretary of the commission.

"This is an ideal set-up for a state sales tax," declared Senator Gunsett, following the opening meeting, when members of the commission assembled with Governor George White and Tax Commissioner Carlton Dargusch. "I am still opposed to it, and will continue to fight for a tax on utilities."

It's the Southern sunshine you read about, combined with the right sort of climate and moisture, that makes the Carolinas, Georgia, Kentucky, Maryland, and Virginia the best tobacco country in the world.

You can stand down there in that Southern sunshine and almost see it grow.

New Anti-Crime Weapon

ONE of the obstacles that hampered Chicago authorities in trying to rid the city of gangsters and thugs has been removed.

Infesting the Chicago underworld were and still are many men with known prison records and who live—many of them luxuriously—without any evident means of income. The police know them to be criminals but are unable to pin on them specific charges that will hold.

The recent session of the legislature, it has just become known generally through the conviction of several underworld figures, amended the state vagrancy law in a way to make this a useful weapon in warring on this class. Under the amended act, anyone with an evil reputation, who is without legitimate occupation and whose record shows a penitentiary, jail or workhouse term may be sent to prison for six months.

The law is one which could find victims in nearly all cities. It provides a way for striking at an element, the members of which generally are known to be criminals but who are able to avoid detection in committing crimes.

If proper use be made of it, Chicago should be able to clean out the nests of crooks that have given that city an evil reputation. A promising start in this direction has been made.

Hunter's Paradise

ANOTHER American phenomenon is that the country can lead the world in agriculture and industry and still provide good hunting for millions of sportsmen during several weeks of each year. Civilization and commercialization have encompassed rather than pushed back the wilderness.

Within a few hours' motoring distance of every great center of population in the United States can be found good gunning of some sort, although there was a period in our national development when wild life was scarce and isolated in a few narrow regions. Conservation has brought it back in abundance.

Hunting season is unusually welcome this year because of the opportunity it gives the unemployed to restock empty larders. In spite of closed seasons destitute mountaineers have subsisted for months on poached game just as their pioneer ancestors lived on the unprotected game of their day. It is unfortunate that the high cost of hunting makes it prohibitive for many city families in need of fresh meat.

In the conservation of game and the revival of good hunting the United States has demonstrated how one may eat his cake and have it too. Conservation has increased wild life in spite of a rapidly growing army of gunners. There are popular hunting grounds in the thickly populated East where bagging a deer is comparatively easy and the risk of getting shot almost as great.

"STOLEN LOVE"

by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

COPYRIGHT BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

CHAPTER L

In the car again, scrubbing at her sticky hands with an ineffectual handkerchief she said, "I am sorry Curtis—I shouldn't have taken so long—"

"It's all right," he said, and increased the speed, over a level stretch between two hills.

He was lost in his thoughts again, his secret, troubled thoughts. "She smiled at that old man who sold hot dogs, just the way she does at me," he thought bitterly. "A dirty old man with gray whiskers. And I used to think it was just for me—that light in her eyes and the flashing smile like sunshine . . . the fool I was . . . She has it for everybody—even a hot dog vender and a mangy dog.

"She looked at him when he gave her the extra pickle, the way she looked at me when I put my ring on her hand . . . the love that I thought would be mine, already squandered on someone else, some boy, some worthless loafer standing out in front of a poolroom now . . . Oh, what a fool I've been, what a blind, trusting fool . . ."

Her hand closed over his arm again. "Curtis, you look so stern. It—it frightens me—"

He came back with a start, tried to answer naturally. "I'm not stern—just thinking that's all—"

"About what?"

"Oh—business."

"Don't, Curtis. Please don't. This is our first day together for so long. We're always rushing, always letting people and business come between us. Can't we go slower, while we're in the lovely country, with the sunshine and the hills to see? It doesn't matter if they have to wait for us, does it?"

"Not so far as I'm concerned."

"Then let's forget them, and just go as slowly as we want to, shall we?" She laughed, and drew a little nearer. "I'm so sick of people—even nice people like the Lairds, and your mother. Let's be terribly selfish, and poke along and— Oh Curtis—look — poppies — millions of them, under the fence . . . could we . . . would it be perfectly contemptible of us to stop, and get some—please—"

He looked at the orange field of poppies, and the laughing girl beside him, her flawless skin tinged with gold in the sun.

"Perfectly contemptible of us," he said, and his heart skipped a beat. She was so lovely . . . so lovely . . .

She rolled under the barbed wire of the fence, and raced ahead into the poppies. "Aren't they beauties—did you ever see such huge ones?"

"No," he said, smiling faintly, "I never did."

"Neither did I," she started to say, and stopped. The little patch of them she and Bill had found on the high road last summer . . . Bill . . . must everything remind her of Bill? Must he be always in her thoughts, always coming between her and Curtis whom she wanted so to love . . .

With a little half strangled sob she flung herself into his arms, crushing the blossoms against his coat. "Oh Curtis—love me—love me a lot!"

His arms closed about her, almost automatically. "Love all poppies and dogs—it's all one to her," he thought. "The same degree of intensity—just a passing mood. Well, I know now . . . I know how much these sudden bursts of affection are worth . . . nothing at all . . . nothing . . ."

"Come," he said at last, "we must be going on to the cabin. The roads are dangerous up there after dark—"

"Oh yes," she cried, conscience-stricken. "And your mother may be worried. What time did she leave, Curtis? Awfully early?"

"Oh, some time before we did—come on!"

"Now you sit right there, and don't move until lunch is ready!" Ruth pushed Bill into the one comfortable chair, and kissed the top of his head.

"See, we're going to have a crab Newburg—and you don't even have to crack the crab for me! That's the kind of a hostess I am—all kinds of service. Will'um, dearie, in the top drawer of my chiffonier—in the back, under the nighties you'll find a bottle—atta boy! It's good stuff, too, a friend of mine got it from a druggist, real prescription whiskey. There are two glasses there somewhere. Now aren't you glad you came!"

She stole a quick look at herself in the mirror over the dressing table which was doing duty as buffet. Her hair looked terrible—simply terrible—but never mind, the lunch was going to be good, and she had him upstairs at last—that was the main thing.

"Say, I didn't know you could cook!" he said, passing his plate back for a second helping of crab.

"There's lots of things you don't know about me," she said. "I don't know—but people usually get the wrong idea about me, Will'um. They think if a girl is good looking she's—well—not domestic. I am. I just love to cook, and make things comfy, or I would if I had the right fellow to do it for. I get so darn lonesome all alone. Don't you ever get lonesome, Will'um?"

"Oh yes—sometimes."

"Well, now that you're back in town—"

"But I'm not going to be here long," he said quickly. "I'll have to be going back soon—"

"Bill—you aren't!"

"I have to, Ruthie."

She rose to take the plates away. "I'll miss you—"

"Come on down south, and marry Rollo, and you won't miss me," he said, avoiding her eyes.

A little spasm of pain passed over her bright face. "I told you I'd only marry for love or money," she said. "I meant it."

"Rollo will have plenty of money, and he loves you."

"You spoilt all that."

"I—why Ruth—that's a crazy thing—"

"No it isn't a crazy thing to say, Will'um. It's the truth. I'm going to say it. I've been wanting to say it long enough. I haven't been able to see Rollo, since I met you—"

Her soft arms were about his neck now, her lips on his cheek. "Will'um—do you hate me so much? Why, Will'um—you seemed to like me pretty well. I haven't forgotten the fun we had together if you have. You seemed to like me pretty well, then—"

He jumped up, and shook himself with a rather unsuccessful laugh, "See here, Ruth—this is getting dangerous. Why, what would Rollo say to me horning in on his preserves this way, and you flattering me—"

"I'm not flattering you. Oh, be serious—be serious!" she cried, her brown eyes wet and starry. "Bill Martin, you know I'm not fooling. I ought to have more sense, but darn it—I haven't. Don't go away. Don't Will'um, darling. Stay here with Ruthie." Her arms were tight around his neck now, she was holding him close.

Her voice went on, crooningly. "You know you like me—you know you do, Will'um—I can tell. And you aren't horning in on Rollo's preserves, 'cause he's out of the running—kiss me, honey! . . . No—not that way—miserable little peck, as if we'd been married ten years—or twenty—Will'um."

"Ruth—have a heart! I'm Rollo's friend—"

"The devil with Rollo. Say you're going to stay—just a little while, Will'um—just another week—come on—that's a teeny, tiny little bit to promise—one little bit of a week—"

"I've got to go back—right away. I only came up—" he broke off in confusion—"I only came up—for a couple of days—didn't really expect to stay."

He was standing up now, looking around for his hat. She saw him, knew that he was going in a moment. "I know why you came up," she cried suddenly, her eyes blazing, the red mounting to her temples with the tide of her disappointment and anger.

"Oh—well—I've got to be on my way Ruth. Thanks a lot for the—"

"Yes, thank me for the lunch and run. Run away to safety. For fear you might accidentally fall for me! And that might bother your friend Rollo—never mind me—let me break my heart if I'm fool enough to break it—that's nothing, just so long as dear, darling, lovely, sweet Rollo is happy—"

She began to cry, chokingly. "Oh Bill—it's such a farce. Such a darn, hopeless farce. I know what's the matter with you. It isn't Rollo—it Joan—Joan Hastings. I know why you came up here—to see her. To make sure that she was really going to be married. Thought it might be a misprint in the papers—ha, ha—I know—I've been watching you whenever her name was said—I know—"

"Look here, Ruth—that's no way to talk. I—"

"No it isn't—say anything but the truth! That's what you believe in doing. What's the matter with you, are you afraid? If you wanted her why did you sit back and let Barstow grab her—"

"Joan—I—I wouldn't stand in her way—"

"No—just in my way. Just break my heart for Rollo. I know you, Bill. And you do like me. I know you do. I wouldn't care if you didn't. I wouldn't run after someone who didn't want me—but I can tell you do. I know—I am no fool. Oh love me, Bill—love me—you can't have Joan—"

He took her clinging hands tight in his. "Ruth—for heaven's sake, don't rub it in. I do think a lot of you, but—I don't know—" he broke off in confusion. "Sounds silly to say it, but I guess you can only really love one woman. At least, that's how it is with me. I wish I didn't, but I always have—always will—"

Ruth's face was scarlet now, she was beyond reason, beyond control. She knew she was doing everything wrong, frightening him away, undoing all the good, but she couldn't stop now—it had to come out—

"Yes, you'll go on your whole life, worshipping at the shrine of that plaster saint—making a fool of yourself over her. I know. I know plenty more, too—plenty that would make you see she's no saint. I have a good mind to tell you—it'll do you good—you have it coming—"

She held fast to his coat, holding on with all her strength—"No you don't—no you don't walk out till I tell you! Right now—right this minute she's on a wild party with Curtis Barstow—sneaked off to a love nest in the country. And if you want to know how I know she's gone with Barstow I'll tell you—I—"

Her words ended in a shriek, a choking, agonized shriek. He had seized her, was shaking her, as a terrier shakes a rat. Her neck was breaking, her eyes were bursting out of their sockets.

With a groan he flung her on the bed, and leaned against it, his face working. For the first time in his life he had hurt a woman. He had shaken her brutally. And to think that only a moment ago he had had her arms around him, had been drawn to her, almost loving her—

The minutes passed. Ruth's whimpering cries ceased. Slowly she struggled to her feet, her eyes glued on the man whose strong brown hands had tightened on her shoulders.

Quietly, carefully, hardly breathing, she began to move to the door . . . inch by inch . . . inch by inch. . . .

Ruth was almost at the door now. In another moment she'd be safe, in the hall, calling for help. . . .

Carefully she turned the knob, never taking her eyes off of the man leaning against the bed. The door wouldn't open . . . stuck again . . . darn it—darn it—she shook it gently, a little harder, it wouldn't open! She pulled on it with all her strength, and the sticky varnish gave with a faint screech. . . .

"No—not until you tell me where Joan is—where Joan is—do you hear me?" The squeak of the door had roused him. His hands were on her shoulders again, holding her fast.

She began to whimper. "You're hurting me—let me go—I'll scream—I'll scream so loud—"

"Shut up, you little fool—keep quiet!" But he released his hold. "I'm not going to hurt you—just tell me about Joan—tell me—"

"You did hurt me—you did—"

"I know," his hands dropped heavily to his sides. "I must have been crazy. Forgive me."

"You shouldn't have done it," she said unsteadily. Her eyes rested on him accusingly, amorously . . . he was so big, so supple and strong. "I didn't know you were such a cave man! Wonder you didn't give me a black eye!" She began to giggle helplessly. "I didn't know they made 'em like that any more—"

Clean Hands Ward Off Disease

Frequent Washing Is Best Way to Rout the Germ Legions

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

MEASLES, CHICKEN pox, scarlet fever and other infectious diseases are common ailments of childhood. It is probable that many of the diseases children catch can be traced to dirty hands where disease germs lurk. The common habit of childhood to put the fingers in the mouth increases the danger.

This menace is ever present. No doubt it will surprise you to learn that millions of germs can be removed from your hands after handling a few door knobs and the common household objects. This fact has been demonstrated repeatedly in the researches of laboratories.

It is true that most of the germs are harmless in their nature. But occasionally the germ may be of the type that leads to serious disease. Most contagious diseases, especially the so-called "childhood diseases," are quickly spread in this manner.

Cleanliness of the hands is absolutely necessary when you care for a member of the family who is sick with a contagious disease. Carelessness in this matter may spread the disease to other members of the household.

Disinfecting the Hands

Everyone should be familiar with the simple procedure of disinfecting the hands. They should be soaked in 1 per cent "liquor cresolis compositus," or a 1:1,000 solution of bichloride of mercury. The druggist will supply the solution.

Next thoroughly wash the hands with soap and water. Follow this by again immersing the hands in the germicidal solution. Pay special attention to the spaces about the finger nails.

I wonder how many of my readers are familiar with the cleasing methods and the care of the hands used by surgeons before they operate. The surgeon washes his hands and forearms with soap and water for five minutes. He vigorously scrubs with a bristle brush and then scaks his hands for one minute in 85 per cent alcohol. The hands are then soaked in a 1:1,000 bichloride of mercury solution for two minutes.

I am telling you all this to impress upon you how important absolute cleanliness is. There has been marked improvement in the results of surgery since this thoroughness has been practiced.

Bear in mind that a very large percentage, perhaps ninety, of infectious disease can be traced to dirty hands. Children and adults should be impressed with the importance of frequent washing of the hands and always before eating or handling food

AT THE GRAND

Circumstantial evidence has sent many an innocent man to jail. Legal authorities are continually arguing whether or not it should be considered a modern jurisprudence. In "The Cowboy Counsellor," now playing at the Grand Theater, there are several graphic illustrations of the danger and foolishness of accepting such evidence as fact.

AT THE CLIFTONA

No matter how you start life and where you were born, if you are meant to be an actress, you will become one, is Elizabeth Allan's philosophy judging from her own career which currently rests in "No Marriage Ties," Richard Dix's latest starring picture for RKO-Radio Pictures coming to the Cliftona Theatre.

Born in the small seaside village of Skegness, Lincolnshire Eng., Miss Allan aspired to teaching, specializing in elocution. As the crowning effort of her training she understudied a leading actress at the Vic theatre in London. She remained to act in provincial tours, and in a short time became a seasoned player.

Miss Allan's screen career, while brief, has been auspicious. Her first picture was "Alibi." She scored in "Yesterday's Rich," featured with Colin Clive and Lewis Stone, and was then featured with Leslie Howard in "Berkeley Square."

Freckled, red-haired, blue-eyed, five feet five and twenty-three years of age, Elizabeth Allan is a vivacious, superbly talented English miss. She is especially suited for dramatic roles, such as the one she plays with Dix in "No Marriage Ties."

Will Rogers Picks A Story For This Spot

By WILL ROGERS

THE best story at Atlantic City is about a Scotchman. They stick to Scotch at Atlantic City, because they're kinda conservative. Well, this Scotchman by the name of McGregor, was awful careful about his eating. He never eat breakfast all week, and he had only a cup of coffee for dinner, and ate mighty little. When he was walking up to pay his bill, he learned that the meals went in with the price of the room. He ran right past everybody and drowned himself in the ocean.

WALNUT-TWP SCHOOL NOTES

Eighth Grade, Mr. Griffith

Glen Goldsberry and Elizabeth Smith entered the eighth grade this week. This makes a total attendance of fourty-five.

High School

WALNUT HAS VISITOR FROM SUNNY SOUTH

The American Literature and American History classes were honored Wednesday by Captain Tom Gibson of Friar's Point, Miss. Mr. Gibson owns and operates a plantation of some two thousand acres in that state on which, with the exception of a very little livestock, the chief product is cotton.

He gave a forty-five minute talk which was probably one of the most interesting ever given in the Walnut High School auditorium. He explained their method of tilling the soil, their ways of getting labor, their ways of paying or providing for the negro and their ways of punishing the negro for disobedience or crime. He told of the activities of the negro, particularly their ways of living, their religious services, superstitions and "hoo dooes."

His talk was greatly made most colorful by actual stories told of happenings on or around his own plantation. No speaker could have wished for a more attentive audience as the classes sat spell bound while he told of a life so much different from our own.

However, Walnut had a few things to show Mr. Gibson which were new to him and his Southland. Taken on a visit to the Agriculture and Farm Shops he said that this was something unheard of in their southern schools and congratulated us on our achievements.

Miss Jones

The first year French class has begun the conjugation of verbs.

The American Literature class has begun the study of the colonial period.

The burlap was received last Wednesday for the Pictorial Museum of Senior Literature. Panels of green burlap were hung between each of the windows and wide strips were tacked above the blackboards. Colorful pictures will be placed on the burlap tracing American Literature.

Ralph Dunkel, '35, handed in the following themes:

"And does the journey last the livelong day?
From morn till night, my friend,
And does the road wind up hill all the way?
Yes, to the very end."

When you begin life there is one thing you must do, always, that is fight for a living, (if you expect to be a man). Some people work awhile and rest awhile, they never reach the top. It is the person who applys himself that goes places.

Some people say, "He's lucky," he gets the breaks. He probably makes the breaks come to him.

Edison says the genius is ninety-eight per cent perspiration and two per cent inspiration. He worked from twelve to eighteen hours a day and if any man ever reached the top he did.

Some people say that the world owes them a living. It does but you have to work to get it. Regardless of what lines of work you are in, if you do the best you can, first, last and all the time you will climb the ladder of success. You can't keep a good man down.

A DREAM

I went to sleep one night and had a beautiful dream. I dreamed I was a dentist and was applying my skill on Doc. Drill, my dentist.

I had him strapped to the chair with his mouth pried open. First I took a drill and turned on full speed straight at a beautiful molar, grinding and grating until I had reached the nerve. Then gently but consistently explored the cavity to find the "ouchiest" spot.

During the enjoyable process I mixed up the conversation with, "Open your mouth a little wider, it won't take long now," and, "Come back in three days."

The scene shifts to a school room and the pupils are the teachers of Walnut school. The pupils are assigning the lessons which are as follows: Sixty-eight pages of History with forty dates to memorize, ninety Physics problems to illustrate and explain; a special assignment for one person (extra) is twenty hours a day of cement laying, and eighty-four pages of England's development to study and outline.

This is given with a caution of, "Anyone not completing his assignment twice—fails."

Home Making, Miss Mettler

The first year class has their laboratory aprons well started. They are progressing of very rapidly as a class.

The second and third year classes are still on the wardrobe project but in about two weeks they will start to make wool dresses. Some must make woolen dresses while others can choose whatever kind of material they want. It is thought now several girls are contemplating making woolen suits.

Shop Class, Mr. Bowne

The shop class has just finished making bench staps for the work benches and tool and mail boxes. In making these two articles they acquired seven skills and had a large number of experience. They learned how to measure with a square, saw a straight line, smooth down a board with a plane; how to adjust and use a T-level and the use of a brace and bit.

Some of the boy's tool and nail boxes will be on exhibit at the Pumpkin Show.

The local F. F. A. is going to have the same exhibit at the Pumpkin Show they had at the Ohio State Fair. It will be shown with the school exhibit this year.

Miss Ruffner, Music

The fourth, fifth, and sixth grade classes are singing two part music.

The seventh grade correlated their English and Music the past week. The class wrote descriptions of the Indian song and The eighth grade music class is singing three part music.

Mr. Hickman is making plans for class instrumental lessons.

The high school glee club has ordered the "Everybody Sing Book."

Glee Club

President, Warren Brown; Vice President, Elizabeth Reber; Secretary and Treasurer, Jean Costlow; News Reporter, Grace Jinks. The Glee Club has begun work on the radioletta "Please Stand By." It promises to be a real favorite. Watch the paper for further announcements.

Howard Coodrey, ... Freshman in Public ... course was elected to ... Glee Club at Capital ... This is a rare compliment ... Freshman. He has had ... lessons other than the ... the high school Glee Club ... Miss Ruffner directs. The director of Glee Club at Capital university is Mr. Wilbur E. Crist. It was his same Glee Club which won the state champion ship in ... '33.

The weekly report ending Sept. 28 shows boy's percentage of attendance 81; girls 96.

The monthly report shows the total enrollment now is 146, there being 72 boys and 74 girls. The boys' per centage of attendance for the month was 88; girls 97. The average daily attendance for the boys is 62 for girls 72 making a total of 135. There has been only two cases of tardiness.

Heaviest Insect to Scale Ceiling

The largest and heaviest insect which can walk upside down on a ceiling is probably the gecko, the general term applied to any lizard of the family Geckonidae. The group is cosmopolitan in distribution, occurring anywhere in warmer climates, even in the remotest oceanic islands, and is adapted to very diverse habitats. The geckos are for the most part not larger than the common American chameleon; that is, nine inches, including the tail.

It's GOOD BUSINESS to wear good-looking shoes

Your shoes can tell whether or not you are alert and "up on your toes". It's up to you to be sure they don't make you look, and feel, "down at the heels".

This oxford puts spring in your step, adds snap to your suit and makes you feel "up and at 'em" with new zeal.
